

Dr John Treacy

MBBS, MD, FRACS

Associate Professor General and Weight Loss Surgery

Dr Treacy graduated in medicine at the University of Adelaide in 1984. He then completed a Doctorate of Medicine (PhD equivalent) with the University of Adelaide as well as gained his surgical qualifications (Fellowship) with the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons in 1994.

He undertook three years post-fellowship training in upper gastrointestinal plus hepato-pancreato-biliary surgery at the Royal Adelaide Hospital and at the Royal Hallamshire Hospital in Sheffield, UK. During this time, he was involved in surgery and evaluation of gastric bands for the National Health Service.

He moved to Darwin in 1997 and has been undertaking weight loss surgery at the Darwin Private Hospital since.

Dr Treacy is an Associate Professor at Flinders University (NT Medical School), part time Staff Specialist at the Royal Darwin Hospital and Visiting Medical Officer to the Katherine District Hospital.

He is currently Principle Researcher for the Bariatric Surgery Registry at the Darwin Private Hospital (with the ANZ Metabolic and Obesity Surgery Society), Principle Investigator for the ANZ Emergency Laparotomy Audit – Quality Improvement, at the Royal Darwin Hospital (with the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons) and Chair of the Morbidity Audits Committee of Royal Australasian College of Surgeons.

His interests include weight loss surgery, endoscopy of the bile and pancreas ducts (ERCP) and surgery for dialysis, for persons with kidney failure.
